BIO

Tomas Collin is an osteopath with a broad interest in health promotion, especially the osteopathic community's role in contributing to patient health education and building healthy public policies. He is currently studying a MSc programme in clinical practice. Tomas is the elected president of the Norwegian association of Osteopaths, combining this role with clinical work in Færder, south of Oslo, where he also works with an elite handball team. Tomas is heavily involved with the Nordic Osteopathic Association and the European Forum and Federation for Osteopathy, currently chairing the Education Committee.

Presentation title

"The road to regulation" - Nordic developments

Abstract

Becoming regulated as a health care profession is essential for the future of the osteopathic profession, globally. The Nordic osteopathic associations have joined forces to promote the profession, gain support and facilitate regulatory processes.

Nordic Osteopathic Congress 2022

The Nordic Osteopathic Association aims to strengthen and develop the Nordic and wider osteopathic community by publishing the Nordic Osteopathic Journal and in turns arranging the Nordic Osteopathic Congress, in addition to continuously be sharing information and providing support at an organisational level. This presentation will give a brief overview and reflections on recent regulatory developments.
